The Linux File System

- A file system controls how data is stored and retrieved.
- Each group of data is called a file and the structure and the logic rules used to manage files and their names are called file systems.
- A file system is a logical collection of files on a partition or disk.
- On a Linux system, everything is considered to be a file.
- On Linux file and directory names are case-sensitive.